In order to create better story, I gradually pay less attention to my daily life but...

watch a lot of anime to try to learn from them keep drawing in my room alone to try to think of story ideas

Eventually, I am absorbed by the screen.
I have been caged into the virtual black hole alone, which has nothing but infinitely dark space. And I never come back again.

I regret that I choose to escape while facing difficulties. I should have more confidence on my work and myself so I won't easily give up while facing others' opposition and critique.

Restart